Ohio Short-Term Employment Forecast 1st Quarter 2019 to 1st Quarter 2021

Summary

The data in this report was compiled and analyzed prior to the COVID-19 pandemic. (See Data Limitations on page 3 for more information.) As of March 6, 2020, employment in Ohio was expected to increase by 1.6 percent from first quarter 2019 to first quarter 2021, a gain of 94,550 jobs. In addition, 708,922 job openings were projected annually — 252,833 because of workers leaving the labor force, and another 408,814 job openings because of workers moving from one occupation to another occupation.

Methodology

Current methodology reflects the changing workforce of the 21st century and recognizes that workers may have several career changes during their working life. This dynamic workforce is reflected in the estimation of job openings, which are created when a worker moves into another occupation and is no longer limited to the notion that only retiring workers will create job openings. This methodology considers job openings resulting from labor force exits (workers who leave the labor force entirely due to retirement or other reasons) and from occupational transfers (workers who move from one occupation into another occupation). The latter are much more common as a worker may switch occupations multiple times during their working life for various reasons. Occupational transfers do not account for workers who change jobs but stay in the same occupation as there is no impact on the overall employment in the occupation.

Total Openings in an Occupation

The other source of job openings is through industry growth. As the demand for products and services increases in an industry, the number of workers in occupations employed in that industry will also increase. Occupational job growth is the difference between the base employment and projected employment values for a period. Occupational growth may be negative, as a result of changes in technology resulting in fewer workers needed to achieve the same level of labor productivity. Overall, the number of openings created by growth, for most occupations, is lower than openings due to labor force exits and transfers.

Key Points for End Users

Employment projections provide an idea of what is expected for workers in the future. Educators, workforce professionals, employers, job seekers, students, and others can use projections to learn about:

• Areas of the economy that are projected to have positive or negative growth indicating those areas expected to have the best employment opportunities.

• Occupations projected to have more job openings than others, informing stakeholders who prepare and train the workforce.

• Possible career pathways, as occupations with a high number of transfers may lose workers to a related occupation requiring a higher level of education or experience and increased pay.

Current methodology provides greater clarity in what is being measured, thus the results are more reliable and more accurate for smaller occupations. This methodology was designed to better understand and project labor force dynamics.

Technical Notes

The Ohio short-term industry and occupational forecasts were derived primarily from data produced by the Occupational Employment Statistics (OES) and the Quarterly Census of Employment and Wages (QCEW) programs. The forecasts were funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL).

Short-term (two-year) and long-term (ten-year) employment forecasts are calculated differently and serve different purposes. The two-year forecasts reflect seasonal and business-cycle changes; the ten-year forecasts are strongly influenced by structural changes in the economy. Short-term forecasts provide more timely information; long-term forecasts are helpful for extended economic planning and evaluation.

Industry Employment Forecasts

The forecasting models utilized a historical monthly employment series from the QCEW program data through March 2019. Industry groups with three- or four-digit North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) codes were chosen. Trend, ordinary least squares regression, and autoregressive forecasting models were used. These methods measure the relationships between employment and one or more other economic variables, such as populations, labor force participation rate, income, housing, related industries, and more.

Occupational Employment Forecasts

Occupational estimates were derived from an industry-occupation matrix. From a three-year OES survey cycle, industry staffing patterns were generated based on the Standard Occupational Classification (SOC) coding structure. Occupational patterns for work arrangements outside the scope of the OES program (including agriculture, private household, self-employed and unpaid family workers) were developed using U.S. national staffing patterns and U.S. Census of Agriculture information.

Wages

The median wage estimates were produced using OES data, which are based on a semiannual mail survey. The survey gathers employment and wage data for specific occupations by geographic area and industry. Statewide Ohio wages were used when available.

Annual Openings

To project occupational openings, Ohio uses national separation rates calculated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) caused by workers exiting the labor force due to retirement or other reasons (labor force exits) and separations caused by workers transferring to different occupations (occupational transfers). Projections of separations are combined with projections of employment change to determine occupational openings.

Educational and Training Classifications

DOL's educational and training classification system consists of three categories: a) typical education needed for entry, b) commonly required work experience in related occupations, and c) typical on-the-job training needed to obtain competency in the occupation. Complete definitions can be found at https://www.bls.gov/emp/documentation/education-training-system.htm.

Data Limitations

Every effort was made to ensure the accuracy of the projections, but data and forecasts are subject to error. The information in this report is best used as an indicator of employment trends, not as an exact count or prediction. It should be used in combination with other data sources and information. While every attempt is made to incorporate current and near-future events, such as business closings, corporate layoffs, openings, and expansions, it's not possible to know everything that might happen. Events that may take place after the projection period or announcements concerning closings, layoffs, openings, and expansions known after projections were completed are not reflected in the forecasts. Also, legislative policy could cause employment to change. Events such as these will likely cause the actual employment numbers to vary significantly from these projections.

This report provides estimates of the number of jobs, not the number of employees. It makes no distinctions for employment characteristics such as full-time, part-time or secondary jobs.

[1] Numeric change measures the projected annual number of job gains or losses in an occupation for the projection period.
[2] Exits are the projected number of workers leaving an occupation and exiting the labor force entirely.
[3] Transfers are the projected number of workers leaving an occupation and transferring to a different occupation.
